In the West Side

The Outstanding Westsider of the Week in Indianapolis a while ago was Tom Houston, Howe '43, a fellow who likes sports, who likes to work with youth, and who is combining the two interests for a program enhancing the opportunities of Wayne youngsters. Tom Huston, a manufacturing analyst at Allison Division General Motors, works with statistical data on the job and he works with basketballs, footballs, and boys after working hours. As co-chairman of a Chapelwood School PTA basketball project, he helped organize the school district's first 4th and 5th grade boys' basketball league. Practicing 2 nights per week and Saturday mornings, the program included 48 boys and was completely staffed by dads. He is Secretary, too, of the Ben Davis Cadet Football League which included 250 boys in its 1968 program. Another "dads" program, the league has no school ties but it serves to get boys ready for the school athletic program.

Mr. Huston and his wife, Betty, live at 7205 Tina Dr. They have two children; Denise is an 8th grader at Fulton while Jim is in the 5th grade at Chapelwood. Following three years in the U.S. Navy as an aerial photographer he attended Indiana University where he graduated in 1949 with a B.S. degree in Business Administration.

This 44-year-old westsider and his family belong to the Chapel Hill Methodist Church. He is presently Treasurer of the Chapelwood PTA and is a member of the holding corporation organized in the school district to finance the construction of South Wayne Junior High. For hobbies he is a stamp and coin collector, and is a "bug" on Civil War history.

A man who supports his community by both words and deeds, Tom Huston is an asset to the westside.

On Chivalrous Achievements

Roger Zuercher arrived in our office not too long ago with a stack of books trapped under his arm, which is not unusual, to announce plans for his newest and probably most ambitious project. He said that he had just come from the superintendent's office where Colonel Kelly had voiced enthusiastically his approval of the proposed History of Howe School.

Intrigued and a little frightened, we offered our help for the next two or three years—the time Roger thinks he will need.

That afternoon we spent several hours rummaging through attics, closets, back rooms, and basements digging through dust covered files and photograph albums in an attempt to determine the extent of research involved. We ran across one room seemingly dedicated in its entirety to storage of memorabilia left by Father Jennings, former Lower School principal and Assistant Chaplain, and we found a spinning wheel in the old rectory tower. "I need any type of material that will help me understand the school's past," Roger said, "especially diaries and letters." He indicated that determining accurate dates would be especially difficult and asked that interested alumni mail any possibly helpful material to him at the administration building. He promised careful handling and that he would return everything when the job is done.

We thanked him as he left and suggested he might title the book, "A History of Howe from the Beginning of the World to the End of Time, Containing Among Many Surprising and Curious Matters, the Unutterable Ponderings of Various Administrators, The Disastrous Projects of Various Teachers, and The Chivalrous Achievements of Various Cadets; The Three Components of Education; Being the Only Authentic History of the School that Ever Hath Been or Ever Shall Be Published."

Special Gifts

This year's Alumni Fund Drive contributions included two special gifts for which the school is very grateful. Raymond A. Beck '22, gave Howe Dictaphone equipment valued at $800 for use in the administration building, and Ross B. Northrop '35, gave $1762 for the new football scoreboard on Tingley Field.

Alumni Sons

Cadets Tim Rosselott and Dave Phelps were excluded unintentionally from the article "Chip Off the Old Alumnus" in the last bulletin. The son of Charles G. Rosselott '46, Tim is "C" Company Commander. Dave is a sixth grader whose father, William C. Phelps, Jr., graduated in 1952.

Bacchus in Fort Wayne

From the very beginning John N. Spillson, Howe '39, was destined to become a restaurateur, or so his very birth in 1921 in the kitchen of the Waldorf Cafeteria in Detroit, Michigan, seemed to indicate. He was introduced to the restaurant business at the early age of seven when he worked for his parents, Nick and Kate, who operated the Midway Music Box in Monroe, Michigan. In the early 1930's his family moved to Fort Wayne where his father opened the famous Berghoff Gardens which he operated until his death in 1943. From his father, John learned to value quality and service.

During World War II John served in the U.S. Maritime Commission and in the U.S.-N.R. During his stint in the service from 1942 until 1950, he traveled all over the world visiting and studying famous hotel and restaurant operations. Several years later in 1956 he took over a Zesto Ice Cream Stand which he remodeled into a carry-out food service. Five years later he added two small rooms to accommodate forty-six patrons and still again in 1963 and 1964 he added two more rooms, increasing the total seating capacity to ninety-six for dining plus twenty for cocktail patrons. His wife Jayne then redecorated the restaurant to feature plush seating, luxurious red velvet highbacked booths in the Gallerie, velvet booths, loveseats and chairs in the Chambre, and a fabulous collection of original art dating from the 16th century, making Cafe Johnell one of today's most comfortable, luxuriant restaurants in the United States. To this beautiful decor John introduced a continental cuisine that has won him national acclaim.

Having begun with only three employees, the Cafe has increased its staff to twenty-five. John personally trains all employees, many who have been with him for years.

Service at Cafe Johnell has been specially adapted to feature a chafing table with a "chef de rang" who works with the waitresses. Employing this modification of French service, only a portion of the menu items are done at the dinner table itself. The Cafe Johnell which is the largest user of Dover Sole "17 oz." in the entire country uses approximately 8000 pounds of this lush seafood per year. Proving that nothing is too good for his patrons, John features Beefeaters Gin as the bar gin.

Patrons prefer Cafe Johnell to many others because John personally greets every patron, sees to his comforts, and in many instances orders his dinner and wine. His cuisine is of the highest quality and he stocks his wine cellar with vintages dating back to 1902. His wine cellar is considered one of the three greatest between the East and West coasts and it's no wonder, since he travels yearly to France where he personally tastes and selects his wines.

John has built his business on quality food and drink in combination with his dedication to personal service. Wearing a gold laurel wreath symbolic of Bacchus, he does his utmost to bring enjoyment to every guest. He is a Commandeur in Commanderie du Bontemp de Medoc et Des Graves and is active in the local community theater. He enjoys playing golf after a busy day at the restaurant. John is married to the former Jayne Howell of Joplin, Missouri, and they have five children — Kayla, age 19; Nikhi, age 16; Jon, age 14; Mark, age 6; and Nicholas, age 4.

Attention to the fine points of service and quality has won Cafe Johnell numerous distinctions. It was first recommended by Holiday Magazine in 1964 and then again in 1965. In the following three years—1966, 1967, and 1968 — it won the Holiday Award for Dining Distinction. In the same three years the Cafe also received citations from Esquire Magazine for its dedication to Haute Cuisine. In 1964 it was recognized as one of the ten winners for the International Promotion Award and in 1966 the National Restaurant Association presented it with the first place gold seal award for its National Menu Award. From 1963-1967 it also received the Gold Cup Award. "Coronet" and other nationally known magazines have written articles about the Cafe Johnell. In 1966 the mayor of Fort Wayne, Harold S. Zeis, added another distinction to this list of awards by proclaiming July 12th as Cafe Johnell Day.

Many famous and distinctive customers make a point of stopping regularly at Cafe Johnell because they know that there they will have complete anonymity and will not be disturbed. A prominent industrialist and corporation president flies John to various parts of the country where he can get ideas from other famous restaurants to continue bettering the Cafe, if this is possible.

In his transition from ice cream stand to elegant restaurant, John Spillson is a fine example of what ingenuity, adherence, and the quest for new and better things can do. He has used his Greek background to an advantage and has fashioned a restaurant based on what he knows — food and drink. He's a real Bacchus and Cafe Johnell is a Bacchus' paradise.

"The Riflemen won the State Championship and . . . proved to be one of Howe's finest assets in athletic competition."

THE RIFLEMEN – Howe's Winningest Team

The Howe Rifle Team distinguished itself this year by having one of the finest teams of its class in the nation.

The Riflemen won the State Championship; represented Fifth Army in the National Match; took second place in the area regional matches held at Culver; and has an overall record of 81 wins and 4 losses. The team proved itself to be one of Howe's finest assets in athletic competition.

Howe's sharpshooters fired in a total of 44 shoulder to shoulder matches and tournaments winning 43 and losing only to Marmion Military Academy in the Area Regional. In the Area Regional (Mid-Western Meet) Howe's firers placed first, second and third in the individual categories. Art French was the overall champion and the individual standing position champion; Dave Prest was the kneeling position champion.

In the State Meet fired at Culver Military Academy, the Howe Team No. 1 became the State Champions with a score of 1502 fired against 27 other schools. The first team was composed of Art French, Fred Elder, Dave Prest, Lionel L'Esperance, and Willard Newell. Fred Elder led the team with a 380 score. Individually, Fred Elder was the State 4-Position Champion with a score of 476 and was the State Champion in the kneeling position with a score of 99. Willard Newell became the State Champion in the sitting position with a score of 98. Fred Elder placed 1st, Art French 2nd, and Lionel L'Esperance 3rd in the overall competition.

This was the first time in six years that Howe has won the state rifle championship. Strong teams, such as Kemper Military School and College; Western Michigan University; Notre Dame University; Culver Military Academy; St. John Military Academy; Missouri Military Academy; Wentworth Military; and, Northwestern Military Academy, were encountered and defeated in these shoulder to shoulder matches and tournaments.

The team culminated its outstanding season by firing at the Little Camp Perry Matches held at Kemper Military School and College in March against 54 top colleges, military schools, and high schools from across the nation. They won 3rd place in their class, military schools and high schools, and also made an outstanding showing among senior schools.

ALUMNI BULLETIN INTERVIEW:

RAYMOND R. KELLY, SUPERINTENDENT

The editorial staff interviewed Colonel Raymond R. Kelly, Superintendent, recently on problems faced by Military Schools today, with special reference to Howe. Colonel Kelly has been associated with Howe for twenty-nine years, beginning in 1939 as a teacher and coach in the Lower School. After serving in the United States Navy during World War II as a boxing coach of pre-flight cadets, he returned to Howe as head of the department of English in the high school. For many years he also coached the varsity wrestling team. In 1948 Colonel Kelly was appointed Headmaster and served in this capacity for seventeen years. Appointed assistant Superintendent in 1965, he succeeded to the position of superintendent on the death of Colonel Bouton.

Bulletin: Much publicity has been given recently to enrollment difficulties suffered by military schools. Has Howe had a problem of this nature?

Kelly: To some extent, but at the same time we opened this year with the second largest enrollment in the history of the school. Nevertheless, we could use more students in the high school; the lower school is operating at capacity. However, our enrollment has enabled us to meet our budget and we have not cut our services to students. In fact, we have expanded them.

Bulletin: Does the Vietnam war have an effect on the enrollment of military schools?

Kelly: Definitely. The tremendous unpopularity of the war has resulted in an adverse attitude toward all things military, and this has spilled over onto the R.O.T.C. and military schools. However, when the war ends, I am confident that the pendulum will swing back to normal.

Bulletin: What about the regimentation of the military school? Is this a problem in securing enrollment?

Kelly: Yes and no. It is hard to assess because we know that many parents give consideration to Howe primarily because they feel a regimented situation will help their sons. The administration incidentally feels that regimentation helps most boys to become better organized so that they make better achievement. On the other hand, we undoubtedly lose boys because they dislike regimentation. Perhaps today's youth resists all authority more strongly than did previous generations. Certainly, however, youth still needs to learn to live with and to respect authority.

Bulletin: Is it possible that the school might change and become non-military?

Kelly: This is possible, but certainly such a change is not imminent. The Board of Trustees has given consideration to this eventuality in long range planning. A searching in-depth study would be an essential preliminary to any action.

Bulletin: Is it more difficult now to get able students than it was a few years ago? Has the school had to lower academic standards to maintain enrollment?

Kelly: Median ability of the current student body is considerably higher than it was ten years ago, far higher than it was fifteen years ago, although, of course, we have always had many able students. Median ability fluctuates from year to year, but we do not accept students that we feel cannot be prepared for college. We are entirely college preparatory; about 95 percent of our graduates go to college and about 75 percent eventually go at least as far as the A.B. degree. I must add that the school has also made tremendous contributions to the development of students who fall in our bottom quarter in ability. There are many valuable concomitants to education at Howe. We feel that among these are character development and an unusual experience in group living.

Bulletin: Some military schools have had to close their doors within the past year or two. How serious is this situation?

Kelly: Certainly very serious for those schools which were forced to close. Of course, there have always been schools which have developed problems so that they cannot continue. This situation is by no means confined to military schools. At present most urban parochial schools are experiencing grave financial difficulties, and many are unable to carry on.

Bulletin: What really determines whether a school can continue its operation — to serve its particular public?

Kelly: Of course, economics are always at the heart of the problem. A school closes its doors because it becomes economically not feasible to operate. This difficulty in turn is almost always related to a serious shrinkage in enrollment. Most independent schools today are non-profit institutions which depend heavily on tuition income. Without a reasonable enrollment they cannot survive, nor is their survival really justified.

Bulletin: Aren't some independent schools fairly heavily endowed so that their economic burden is lightened?

Kelly: Yes, some are in a very fortunate position in this respect, especially, in substantial scholarship endowment. In fact, some schools generate enough endowment income to offer scholarships to as much as a third or more of their student body. This is a great help in maintaining enrollment and especially in attracting strong students. At Howe, we have enough scholarship monies to aid about 34 students or 8 percent of our enrollment, although none of these is receiving a full scholarship.

Bulletin: What about gifts or endowment for buildings?

Kelly: No independent school — secondary or college — today, can depend on tuition income alone to build necessary facilities, unless their needs are unusually modest. Howe, of course, has been exceptionally fortunate. The generosity of benefactors, particularly of the Herrick family, has enabled Howe to undergo a physical renaissance since 1951.

Bulletin: Does this mean that Howe currently has no need of new physical facilities?

Kelly: No. We are fortunate in having a fine plant and we are able to serve our students well, but we envision certain facilities which would enable us to offer an improved service. We would particularly like, for example, to be able to construct a fine arts building and a field house. Recently the Board of Trustees has engaged the services of a consultant firm, Gonser, Gerber, Tinker, and Stuhr, to help us determine our direction in the next few years. Hopefully we will also raise funds for the facilities we would like to develop.

Bulletin: Is it difficult to secure faculty at Howe?

Kelly: It is always hard to get strong personnel, but we are fortunate in having assembled a very good faculty, in my opinion the best we have had in my tenure at Howe. Several teachers are superior, a level attained usually only after long experience. We hope to improve the staff still further, as the real strength of any school is its faculty.

Bulletin: You appear optimistic about the future of the school.

Kelly: I certainly am. Our Board of Trustees is very forward looking and perceptive and will make any necessary modifications in our structure and program in the years to come. We are not complacent but rather are constantly striving for improvement. Howe will survive for years to come because its substantial contribution to the Christian education of youth will merit its survival.

THE LIVING CHURCH ESSAY How Should Christians Protest?

Tom Daniel's essay "How Should Christians Protest" placed second nationally in the 1969 Church School Essay Contest sponsored by the Living Church magazine.

Concerned with the problem of student protest as a part of the order of the day, the contest opened with the basic assumption that as Christians, young people know that they ought to protest any and all things which by being anti-human are anti-God.

The problem presented was How — in what spirit, using what weapons — should the Christian register his protest. When he finds himself confronted by any evil, how should he react?

A senior in his fourth year at Howe, Daniel is a Cadet 2nd Lieutenant and platoon leader in "D" Company. He has been a member of the National Honor Society, the Herald staff, and the speech team; and he has participated in football, basketball, baseball, and track on varsity and intramural levels.

The son of a Lutheran minister, he lives with his parents, two sisters, and a brother in Akron, Ohio. Tom plans to attend Kenyon College in the fall.

How Should Christians Protest? by Thomas Andrew Daniel

Recent violence in protest of injustice and inadequate law enforcement demands that the interested Christian investigate to what extent he may participate in the various forms of protest.

To answer this question it is necessary to establish some guiding principles. First, God has instituted civil government as his minister to man for good, for the punishment of evildoers and for the praise of them that do well.

Therefore, Christians should respect and obey civil authority and be actively engaged in promoting the common good. However, since at times laws may be unjust or there may be an inadequate enforcement of just laws, Christians have the right and duty to work for the repeal of unjust laws and the proper enforcement of just laws through due process of law. In the evident failure of due process, a Christian may in good conscience participate in public demonstrations designed to dramatize the injustice.

This principle applies not only when one's own legal rights are infringed upon but also and especially when one joins with others deprived of their legal rights. Ultimately, however the rights of individuals and the proper standards of justice must be established by the government through legislative processes.

The Christian must recognize that the will of the Lord is a higher law than that of civil authority. Christians are to obey God rather than man when a civil law conflicts with a clear precept of God, being willing, at the same time, to accept as a part of their crossbearing punishment as consequence for their action.

However, when a Christian disobeys a law which he considers to be in conflict with the higher law of God, he should do several things. First of all he must be quite sure that all legal means of changing the law have been exhausted. He must consult with other men of good conscience to test the validity of his judgment. When he does carry out his act of disobedience it must be in a non-violent manner. His act of disobedience should be directed as precisely as possible against the specific law or practice which violates his conscience. Most important of all, the Christian must exercise restraint in using this privilege because of the danger of lawlessness.

Although a Christian may need to join a protest action, he should guard against identifying himself with groups and individuals who may be protesting the same law, but from apparently wrong motives and who may be seeking to capture a movement for their own improper ends.

In its proper sense civic disobedience consists of violating a specific law in the interest of justice and freedom, particularly as these relate to the needs of others.

Such disobedience is a responsible expression of citizenship only when it is undertaken after all other means of obtaining justice have been exhausted and in full awareness of the demonic and disruptive forces present in any given social order. Under these conditions testing a specific law occurs as a way of determining whether the law at issue conforms to the demands of the "higher law" and the principles set forth in other legal documents, directives and decisions.

This responsibility is perverted and abused when disobedience and resistance are undertaken out of disrespect for law and for the purposes of inducing violence and creating discord and disorder.

The maintenance of civil order at times requires the responsible application of force to the solution of social and political problems. But this is not the task of the Christian individual; rather it is the task of the police forces and military establishments as arms of the government to serve in this capacity. Hence they deserve all the support and encouragement that Christian citizens can give them.

The primary question that confronts the Christian in protest is violence. Is it proper to use violence as a means for reaching one's end? By violence is generally meant methods by which one hurts or harms another human in any physical nature. The weapons of violence are so destructive and so impersonal that they lay a special burden on the Christian citizen. He must remind himself as well as others that human life is sacred, coming from God and that the temptation to resort to violence is a human situation of incalculable magnitude. Because of this it is imperative that the Christian try to work together with other men of good will for the eradication of violation and the expansion of peaceful methods of protest.

"Conscience" is a faculty of man which responds to moral principles that transcend human existence. A Christian is bound by his conscience to disobey any order or law which violates God's will.

Public demonstrations generally are not contrary to law and the Christian may feel at times constrained by Christian love to join a public demonstration.

Petitioning to the government for a redress of grievances can and should normally be done through due process of law for the preserving of peace and tranquility of the nation.

However, the breaking of an unjust law need not necessarily reflect the spirit of anarchy, criminal intent or general contempt for laws. It may in fact, reflect an earnest desire to respect the rule of law and test the validity of a specific law and so provide for a larger measure of justice.

At the same time the Christian should be cautioned against an exaggerated individualism that breeds contempt not only for law, but for the due process of law. He is also to remove himself from the anarchic spirit which pits one segment of the population against the other and finally, he must refrain from asserting his individual rights at the expense of the rights of others.

There are definite guides which the Christian protests and if he remains in these bounds he will never be in the wrong.

CARL B. TINGLEY

The consuming interest Carl B. Tingley has taken in his work at Howe since 1947 is reflected in the atmosphere of admiration and accomplishment that constantly surrounds him. Chairman of the Science Department, advisor to the Varsity "H" Club, and designer-builder of the new athletic complex, Mr. Tingley has devoted much of his life to the cadets.

His latest and probably most significant project has been development of the athletic complex under the sponsorship of the Howe Military School Fathers' Association. The new facility includes football, baseball, and soccer fields, tennis courts, a rubberized quarter mile running track, and a golf driving range. Most of the planning and design of the complex is Mr. Tingley's work, and much of the actual construction is the result of long hours on hot summer days he spent with his own equipment working sometimes into the night. Howe cadets participated in the second annual Tingley Invitational Track Meet on their own ground last month, the baseball team opened its season on the new diamond, and next fall the football team will play on Tingley Field.

For 22 years as advisor to the Varsity "H" Club, Mr. Tingley has helped to promote athletics and school spirit at Howe. The V.H.C. built the varsity dressing room and coaches' office, and it sponsors trophies, pep rallies, flyers, programs, photographs, and transportation to away games. The club cooperates with other agencies of the school to provide refreshments and photographs at school dances, meals for speech and debate meets, special awards, and guest speakers.

As chairman of the Science Department, Mr. Tingley has contributed significantly to the academic progress of Howe School. He has been careful to maintain only the highest standards in the science curriculum, changing and updating courses as students' needs changed. Howe is one of few schools in the area to offer courses in bio-chemistry and anatomy. The addition of a $20,000 biology lab, and improvement of his own "underground" honors lab are reflections of Mr. Tingley's hard work.

He is a man who takes care of a cadet's pet boa-constrictor, who attends almost every athletic event, who plans and works for the future of Howe School, and who is the kind of a man who is everyone's friend.

William G. Hottensen

HOTTENSEN '28, DIES; HEADED GRAIN FIRM

Upon entering the mess hall one day back in 1919, Commandant Captain Berlin asked the name of a young recruit who replied "William Hottensen." "Put a 'sir' on that," ordered the Captain. "Sir William Hottensen," the boy said. William G. Hottensen graduated from Howe in 1928. At age 57, he died of a heart attack in Phoenix, Arizona in February.

Mr. Hottensen was born in Milwaukee. He graduated from the University of Wisconsin and began working for the W.M. Bell Company, grain commissioners, 37 years ago. Before being promoted to the company presidency in the 1950s, he served as vice-president and treasurer.

Mr. Hottensen also was a director of the Milwaukee grain exchange and the Globe Milling Co., Watertown. He organized a number of private investment clubs in Milwaukee.

Mr. Hottensen was a member of the Wisconsin consistory and Tripoli Shrine. He also was a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity, the Wisconsin Alumni association and the Milwaukee Athletic club.

Survivors are his wife, Gertrude, and two brothers, Robert G., Fox Point, and Wallace, Milwaukee.

Howe Military School was included in Mr. Hottensen's will. The family requested contributions to the Wisconsin Heart Association.
