... History ...

THE Howe Grammar School was opened on the second Wednesday of September, 1884. It received its name in memory of the late Hon. John B. Howe, of Lima, Ind., who had deceased the previous year and had closed a life of great liberality and usefulness as a citizen and a churchman by leaving his beautiful residence and the thirteen acres of land upon which it stood to the church upon the decease of his widow. Mr. Howe left some discretion to the church in the use to be made of this legacy, preferring, however, its dedication to the cause of education. He also left ten thousand dollars, the interest of which he preferred should be used for the education of boys who might at length give themselves to the ministry of the church.

The late Bishop of Indiana, the Rt. Rev. D. B. Knickerbacker, D. D., was consecrated in 1883, and finding no organized educational work of the church in his Diocese, corresponded with the Rev. C. N. Spalding, then rector of St. John's Church, Lancaster, Pa., with reference to founding a school for boys in the Diocese of Indiana. The legacy left by Mr. Howe, the great healthfulness of Lima and the beauty of the surrounding country, all influenced the Bishop in desiring to locate the school at Lima. At his request, Mr. Spalding met him there in the spring of 1884, and a conference was held between them and also with James B. Howe, Esq., and Mrs. Frances M. Howe, respectively the brother and widow of the late Mr. Howe. In the event, Mrs. Howe offered for founding the school a former residence of hers with four acres of land. This property seeming not sufficient for a proper start, Bishop Knickerbacker purchased with his private means a property consisting of a mansion house and six acres of land running exactly with the southern line of Mr. Howe's bequest. With this and the property offered by Mrs. Howe, lying directly east of it, with some subscriptions from the good people of Lima to aid in the beginning of the enterprise and some guaranty of expense for a year on the part of Bishop Knickerbacker, Mr. Spalding undertook the rectorship of the school.

It opened at the time above noted with two pupils. The names of these were Frederick Durett Eversole, of Logansport, Ind. (first entered), and Albert Roy Keater, of Fort Wayne, Ind. (second entered).

These pupils lived like sons in the house of their father, and the idea of the school as a true home for its pupils, entertained at the start by the Rector, became a tradition of its management by reason of the small number at first entered, and has ever since been maintained as far as compatible with increasing numbers. These increasing numbers, however, soon made larger quarters necessary, and in the second year of the school, rooms were arranged for pupils in the house given by Mrs. Howe, but as this was contrary to the idea of the school, which would keep all of its members under one roof, in the summer of 1886 a large addition was made by the presentation of the old St. Mark's Church, the New St. Mark's having been built in memorial of Mr. Howe. The old church, thoroughly renovated and almost remade, but preserved in its contour, was annexed to the building purchased by Bishop Knickerbacker and is now that unique part of the present buildings known as St. Mark's Cloister. It gave to the school new school rooms, recitation rooms and dormitory sufficient for twenty pupils.

At the same time, Mrs. Howe built for the school, bath rooms and a gymnasium, and supplied a furnace, at a total cost of about $1,500.

The dining room and kitchen of the old mansion house were removed, and new ones, with modern improvements, added. These, with the old mansion house renovated and veneered with brick, constitute "Knickerbacker Hall."

A beautiful new building of three stories, with tower, was erected by Mrs. Howe in the summer of 1888. This building containing school room, recitation rooms, master's rooms, dormitories, bath rooms, etc., all heated by steam, as is the entire establishment, constitutes that part of the school known as "Howe Hall."

In the summer of 1890 James B. Howe, Esq., presented the school with a fine bell of 1,500 pounds weight, placing it upon a tower erected for the purpose at his own expense.

In 1887 Bishop Knickerbacker purchased a tract of about thirty acres upon Ninnescab Lakes, two miles from the school property. The purchase was made for the benefit of the school, and at the same time to provide a place for the clergy and other church people who might be interested, to pass the heated season in congenial company and amid pleasant surroundings. Here the school has provided a boat house and boats for the boys, and a pier with proper and safe arrangements for bathing

In December, 1882, Mr. Samuel Burnell, long a prosperous and esteemed citizen of Lima, was meditating the gift of a library to the school. His death preventing the execution of his plans by himself, a gift of $500 was made by his heirs, Mrs. Chas. Nichols, of Lima, and Mrs. Chas. Gunther, of Chicago, to carry out his wishes. The library has been carefully selected and is in use by the pupils.

Mr. David F. Dwight, of Detroit, a connection of Mr. Howe, furnished the means of preparing a room for the reception of the library and for the purchase of additional books.

In the summer of 1890 Mrs. Howe furnished the school with a plant for lighting by gas.

In the spring of 1892, Mr. Samuel P. Williams, long a prominent citizen of Lima, presented the school with a tract of about five acres of land, to be a permanent field for the athletic sports of the school. This land being almost completely level in surface and on two sides bordered with beautiful shade trees, is admirably adapted for its purpose.

The field thus given, however, being separated from the school ground by a property of seven acres, on which is a good house and various other improvements, the liberality of Mrs. Howe has added this property also to the domain of the school.

In 1894, John H. Blake, Esq., of Boston, founded a gold medal in perpetuity to be awarded to the student most proficient in Chemistry.

Clarence J. Blake, M. D., of Boston, visiting the school during the same year made valuable additions to the apparatus of the gymnasium. In this year gold medals were founded in perpetuity by Mrs. Howe for the best examination in English Grammar and Spelling, and by Mr. James B. Howe for the boy of the three upper classes making the best declamation.

In the summer of 1895 the management of the school was entirely changed under the direction of the present Bishop of the Diocese. Shortly after his consecration he asked the present Rector, who was maintaining a private school at Lake Maxinkuckee, to confer with Dr. Spalding with a view of uniting the two schools. With the counsel and advice of Mrs. Howe and Mr. James B. Howe an arrangement was made by which Dr. Spalding was liberally paid for his interest in the school and the two schools were united under the name of "Howe School."

To accommodate the two schools it was necessary to make additions. The Bishop secured $1,000 with which to renovate the Howe Cottage and Mrs. Howe gave $1,000 to enlarge and renovate the Rectory.

With these additions the school could not be comfortably accommodated and in 1896 Mr. James B. Howe gave $10,000 for a new gymnasium and dormitory thus doubling the capacity of the school. The building has been named in memory of Mr. Howe, since deceased, the "James B. Howe Hall."

Dr. Clarence J. Blake, of Boston, also gave $6,000 for the erection of a new dining hall to be known as "Blake Hall," in memory of John H. Blake, his wife Sarah A. Blake, and daughter Agnes A. E. Blake, of Boston, Mass.

Provision was also made for lighting the entire plant with electricity.

To complete the history of the school there is annexed here a list of all pupils down to the Easter term, 1898, comprising those who are still in attendance and those who have left the school in good standing.

GUARD MOUNT

SOUTH NINNESCAH LAKE

“Taps.”

Bugle blow,
Sweet and low!

Through the hall,
Hear the call,
“Good-night all.”

Echo seems
To recall
“Peaceful dreams.”
